Common Problems Faced By Women in Remote Areas

Issue #1: Health problems driven by socioeconomic issues

In rural areas dependent on seasonal farming, women lack income opportunities. 45% of pregnant women suffer chronic malnutrition due to demanding agricultural labor and poor nutrition.

With an average monthly income of $16.5, these women lack year-round financial access, limiting their decision-making and influence in the household.

Issue #2: Unexplored Potential in Traditional Skills and Resources

The age-old art of wicker weaving, ingrained in women's heritage, remains largely untapped due to restricted market access. Weavers find themselves isolated from a vast growing market, leading the younger generation to abandon this traditional craft.

Simultaneously, abundant raw materials go unused, representing a missed opportunity for sustainable utilization.

How We Work

Your Sustainable Home

For decors that align with your values, choose handwoven treasures that are not mass-produced.

Go with unique pieces that embody sustainable practices, empower women weavers and celebrate eco-conscious living.

Embrace The Call of Mother Nature

Weave clean and natural aesthetics into your home with handwoven decor.

Crafted from natural materials, these exquisite pieces whisper the sound of rustling palmyra leaves from sun-kissed villages in Flores.

Beauty Meets Daily Function

Beyond beautiful vessels, our handwoven items offer purposeful functions.

Use baskets as stylish storage or attractive centerpiece, while keeping your home neat.

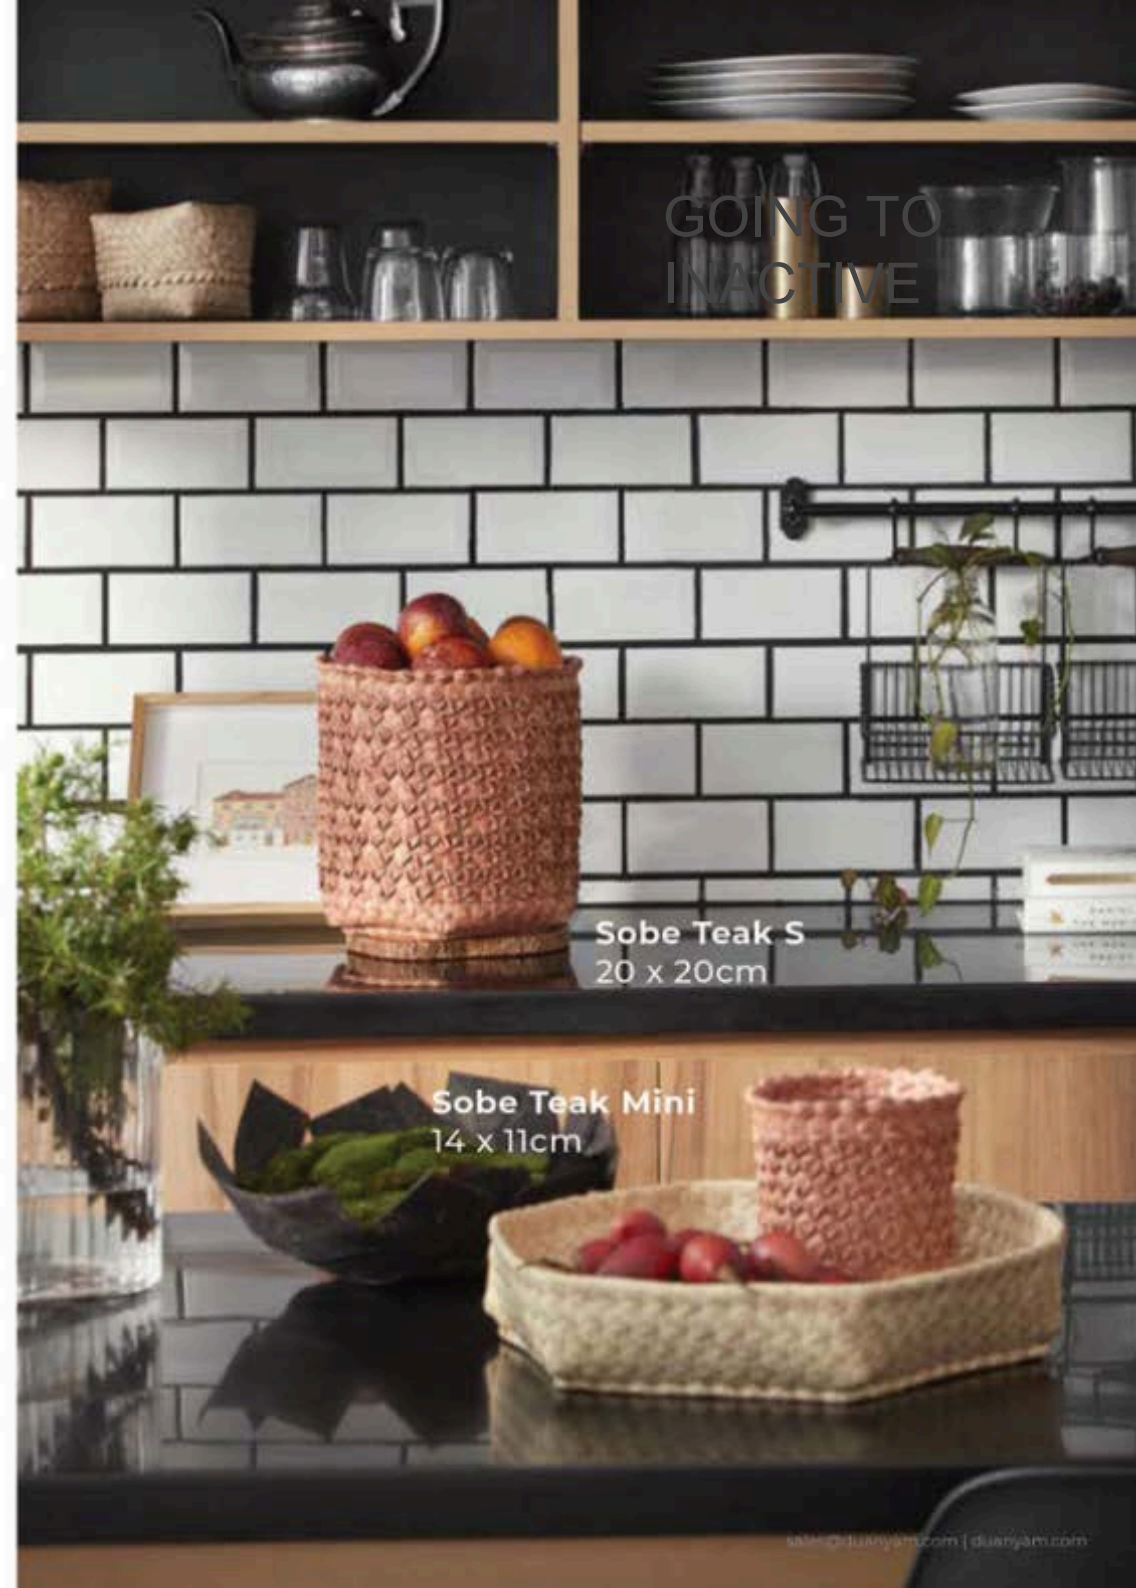

From petite trinket holders to bigger-sized decors, find the perfect handwoven companion to breathe in useful artistry to your living space.

From Mundane To Meaningful

Embrace handcrafted local pieces that tell a different story through its textures and designs.

More than just decorative items, each piece is made by women weavers in remote rural areas, offering enduring craft to elevate your space.

Flores Woven Walls:

Explore The Patterns

Ue Meta

A tapestry of isosceles triangles forms the heart of this wall art, inspired by the warmth of a homemade sweet-potato dish in East Flores.

Ue Malar

Woven in a distinctive rhombus pattern, this wall art also celebrates the humble sweet potato, honoring its significance and echoing the natural world's harmonious balance.

Blego

Capturing the curvy terrain of the Titehena District of East Flores, this wall art takes us back to the warm embrace of Mother Nature and its magical wonders.

Eco Henge

Celebrating the endless gifts of Mother Nature, this wall art merges the humble sweet potato with the undulating landscapes of Flores.

The image shows three woven baskets of different sizes, labeled S, M, and L, displayed in a rustic wooden frame. The baskets are made of light-colored woven material, possibly straw or bamboo, and have a textured, slightly irregular shape. They are arranged in a row, with the largest basket (L) in the center, the medium basket (M) to its right, and the smallest basket (S) in the foreground to the left. The background is a dark, textured wall, and the wooden frame is made of weathered, light-colored wood.
