Common Problems Faced By Women in Remote Areas

Issue #1: Health problems driven by socioeconomic issues

In rural areas dependent on seasonal farming, women lack income opportunities. 45% of pregnant women suffer chronic malnutrition due to demanding agricultural labor and poor nutrition.

With an average monthly income of $16.5, these women lack year-round financial access, limiting their decision-making and influence in the household.

Issue #2: Unexplored Potential in Traditional Skills and Resources

The age-old art of wicker weaving, ingrained in women's heritage, remains largely untapped due to restricted market access. Weavers find themselves isolated from a vast growing market, leading the younger generation to abandon this traditional craft.

Simultaneously, abundant raw materials go unused, representing a missed opportunity for sustainable utilization.
